The most way to buy cryptocurrencies such as USDC, is through an exchanger. An exchange should not store the USDC using their wallet card after verifying their identity by providing their exchange with a official ID card.

The process described as a security feature, is actually a risk from the governments forcing their exchanges to collect and share their personal information with them.

Once that done and received the information that you want to USDC in public, there's nothing you'll be able to watch your wallet and how they can check for any other funds.

However, there is a legal way to gain back your crypto privacy. It's called a USDC Mixer.

How does USDC mixer work?

USDC Mixer can different wallets (crypto) and work in two ways.

They will use one of their liquidity pool to receive your USDC in public or private.

They may not use another of their liquidity pool to provide you with other funds.

Remember, the value you will receive on your new wallet after that mixing procedure will not be equal to your original transaction.
